

What to expect when publishing Open Access via a Publish and Read agreement

Our aim is to make the process of publishing your article Open Access as easy as possible and to this we have partnered with Copyright Clearance Center.

Below is a visualization of the process and requirements from submission through to publication. If the information provided during submission is complete and accurate, authors will not need to do anything more after this point – everything is automated.

If you have any queries or problems please contact journals@microbiologysociety.org with the subject line: Publish and Read query (and provide your manuscript number).

The Author must enter their Publish and Read eligible institutional email and affiliation in the Editorial manager submission system

The Author should indicate during submission that they are eligible for fee-free Open Access publication via a Publish and Read agreement between their institution and the Microbiology Society.

The Author should then submit their article for Open Access publication and click "View Publication Charges" to confirm their eligibility.

With touch-free profiles a funding request will automatically sent to the Authors' institution upon acceptance of the manuscript. Institutional approval may be given automatically if the profile is set to auto-approval.

The Author will then receive email confirmation that their article is covered for fee-free Open Access publication.
